Summary

Bringing sports cruising into the new millennium, the Sealine S41 was very unlike any other. The partial hardtop with "solar sliding roof panel" set her apart from other European sports boats of the day. The bi-level cockpit provides plenty of seating with wet bar and outside hob and the interior is simply cavernous with two double cabins both with ensuite facilities. As a coastal cruiser the twin Volvo Penta KAD 300 diesel engines provide plenty of power to achieve speeds of around 30 knots.

Interior Layout

For an express cruiser of 41 foot the internal space is particularly deceptive and apart from the living area also has two private staterooms with ensuite facilities.

On entering the main cabin there is a saloon incorporating a dining table and seating for up to 6 people. There are three eye level cupboards for storage and a digital TV.

Opposite is a long galley with tongue and groove flooring and fitted appliances. The white Corian worktop provides a practical area to prepare meals but at the same time is elegant and aesthetically appealing. Above the galley is an opening port light with venetian blind.

The forward cabin has a Centreline Queen size bed with access to both sides. Storage is not an issue with eye level cupboards, a vanity unit and a double wardrobe. Two port lights and a hatch ensure light and ventilation. There is a private ensuite shower room with seat and ensuite access to the main cabin head with electric toilet and wash hand basin.

The aft cabin does not disappoint with 6'2" standing room on entering and the option of twin athwartships berths or a large double with infill. Also comfortably incorporated are two full length wardrobes, a vanity unit, bedside drawer, double seating area and ensuite head/shower combination. Three port lights and a large hatch out to the cockpit make it a light cabin.
